JAMES AND EMILY ANN GILES CARLILE

James Carlile was born January 31, 1829 in Mission, England, to Robert and Christiana Spouncer Carlile. James, with his family, joined the church in England in 1848 and migrated to America, crossing the ocean in a wooden ship and landed at New Orleans December 24, 1849. It took six weeks to make the trip. In 1852, they crossed the plains in Captain Jolley's Company. He drove an ox team across the plains. They settled temporarily in Palmyra, Utah, one mile south from Spanish Fork. The mother, Christiana Carlile, was blind several years before her death. James Carlile married Emily Ann Giles, daughter of William and Sarah Huskinson Giles October 30, 1857.

Emily Ann Giles was born June 6, 1837, in Sering Nottinghamshire, England. "Aunt Emily" as she was affectionately called, also to distinguish her from another Emily, was of noble character—sincere, sympathetic, and always ready to assist those in sickness or in distress. She was very active in assisting stricken families during the diphtheria scourge of 1878-1882. She was also an active worker in the Relief Society and served as a teacher. Being necessary to provide their own entertainment, "Aunt Emily" was one of the actors in the home dramatics. She took the leading part in many fine performances. She was a good cook and housekeeper. She cooked for many banquets and wedding dinners in the community. Although her life-span was short, she lived it fully. She died of pneumonia at the age of 57. This sturdy couple suffered the trials and hardships along with the other pioneers of their day.

On April 20, 1859, over 100 years ago, James and Emily Ann in a group of ten families trekked up the Provo Canyon and found this lovely valley in which to settle. As "Uncle Jimmie's" oxen were the strongest, he was appointed to take the lead. The first night after leaving Provo, these pioneers encountered a snowslide in the canyon at the South Fork of the Provo River. This was a large slide and it was impossible for them to get over it that night so they camped at the slide. The next morning, they took their wagons apart and carried each part, along with their belongings, over the slide, put the wagons back together again and proceeded on their journey. As they were crossing the Provo River "Uncle Jimmie" crossed first as his team was the strongest. When a lighter team started to cross, the rushing water started to take it downstream. "Uncle Jimmie" rushed his team back and caught the smaller team and pulled the team, wagon, and family across in safety.

James Carlile was a successful farmer of this valley and a devoted member to his LDS religion. After the death of his first wife, he married a widow, Eliza Durnell, who had one son, George, by her previous marriage. She was a very kind, understanding person and was loved by everyone who knew her. After her death, he married Rachel Moser. In his later life, James was "doorkeeper" for years at the Second Ward Chapel "Old Hall" as it was called and every Sunday night after he had locked the doors, put out the coal oil lights, etc., one could see him with his lantern homeward bound. He was very faithful in all his religious duties. In their later lives, his wife Rachel went to live with home people in Lehi, Utah. James Carlile was the oldest man in Heber at the time of his death—88½ years old. He died September 9, 1917 at the home of his daughter, Mrs. George Barzee, where he had been residing in his later life, and was buried in the Heber City cemetery.

Their family consisted of: Sarah Ann, Evelena, James William, Emily Jane, Charles Robert, and a little girl, Mary Elizabeth, who died at the age of four of diphtheria.
